

Frederick County Commission For Women Logo

August 17, 1993, FCCFW adopted a logo designed by Kathy Whyte of Design & Graphics Casual or Classy, a New Market graphic artist. The design is a Victorian stylized thistle surrounded by "Frederick County Commission for Women."

Thistle, soft and prickly like women, grows undaunted all over the county. [The thistle denotes determination and perseverance.]

The end of the nineteenth century, Americans pursuing woman suffrage wore green, violet, and white. GVW signified "Give votes to Women." FCCFW's white, violet, and green colors symbolize "Women's Voice in Government."

Former FCCFW member Sandra West nominated the FCCFW logo for the Shared Visions Community Bridge, and it was painted on the north wall.
